YOUTH & AGE in Plastic Surgery, Dermatology and Aesthetic Science in 2020

*International Master Course on Aging Science
Science and art are often considered as disciplines with little in common. Science is the systematic and theoretical construction of knowledge; whereas art is the intuitive and expressive construction of one's creativity. Science has a rational approach to the world and strives to eliminate ambiguity. Art, on the other hand, has an emotional approach not only to the world, but also to the individual. Art is subjective and open-endedly welcomes ambiguity.

Despite their differences, however, science and art are inextricably intertwined. “The greatest scientists are artists as well,” said Albert Einstein, who explained that the essence of his insights has always been abstract images, feelings, and even musical patterns, instead of logical symbols or mathematical equations. Take aesthetic science for instance. Each canvas is unique, living, and breathing. It becomes a permanent representation of the work of the surgeon. As each canvas even has the ability to hold their own aesthetic value and agenda, a “successful result” becomes rather subjective. Thus, having the “artistic eye” is as equally important as having the scientific knowledge to achieve the sense of harmony that both the surgeon and subject desire.

However, when we look further into cases of aesthetic and cosmetic procedures, it can be seen as straying away from evidence-based knowledge is one of the main causes for complications. For instance, research shows that more and more patients request cosmetic procedures to look better on social media, caused by the plethora of filters available on mobile applications. These filters blur the line between reality and fantasy, leading patients chase an ideal that even the patients themselves may not be able to fulfill. In this case, the logical and scientific judgement of the experienced surgeon is necessary.

Artistic learning is the secret of growth. This refinement is fundamental. After this evolution, the training allied to technology is the perfect union. The possibility of handling tissues without damaging them, shaping them in three-dimensional form is more important than the quantity executed, since this concept is not in the contemporary scientific rules. Few professionals see this. In fact, the superficial anatomy knowledge has existed for 500 years, plastic surgery a century ago, and high-definition body surgeries for 15 years.

Medical knowledge is based on facts and it is objective. The artistic eye is a subjective opinion and is subject to vary according to current trends; it should be confined to art.

Most physicians have the technical skills to deliver good outcomes; however, having an “artistic eye” is critical when it comes to achieving superb outcomes on a consistent and predictable manner. All patients are different and each patient must be individualized to correct the subtle nuances that escalate outcomes from great to outstanding.

- Mauricio Valderrabans (Plastic surgeon, United States)
- Foad Nahai (Plastic surgeon, United States)
- Daniel Cristina (Plastic surgeon, Italy)

Theoretical and practical medical knowledge is the most important. I think having knowledge in psychology and sociology is also very important in the field of aesthetics.

- Bartolome Massignan (Plastic surgeon, France)

Like artwork, aesthetics of the face & body results from a combination of mastery and endowment. A great masterpiece is the outcome of superior quality material rendered with the skills and sense of the artist, and the craftsmanship of the artist depends not just on the hours of practice, but also on how he or she understands the task and applies the correct techniques to the material. Aesthetic treatments follow a similar design.

The last decade has seen an explosion in aesthetic treatments, fueling the aesthetic market and leading to the introduction of innovative tools and treatment options that allow physicians to redefine youth and age. Absorbing and acquiring technical skills is of obvious importance, however what differentiates the good from the great involves a broader perspective on the world.

IMCAS congresses are unique in their pedagogical approach – while each of the diverse specialties represented at the congresses is distinguished for its individual value, IMCAS strives to provide the synergy manifested when the skills of all the different fields gather to exchange and unite for the progress of aesthetic treatments. The international faculty of 800 world-renowned experts along with the numerous partnerships with academic societies around the world are evidence to the collective spirit that IMCAS embodies, serving also as a guarantee that the educational material is objective and accurate; a platform that offers the possibility to network with the world’s leading experts.

The scientific program of this year’s IMCAS Annual World Congress is designed embracing the junctions and differences in dermatology, plastic surgery and aesthetic sciences.

The scientific program of this year’s IMCAS Annual World Congress is designed embracing the junctions and differences in dermatology, plastic surgery and aesthetic sciences.

IMCAS offers educational sessions for all aesthetic practitioners both novice and experienced. Young dermatologists and surgeons are encouraged to follow the Young series for presentations that cover global overviews of basic procedures. For the more seasoned professionals, the Anatomy series encompasses the classic Anatomy on Cadaver Workshops which focus on the anatomy and techniques pertaining to non-surgical aesthetic procedures through a simultaneous transmission of live dissections and live demonstration of procedures on a patient.

The Live Aesthetic Surgery Course, part of IMCAS Surgery follows a similar format. Watch as the world’s most respected surgeons reveal step-by-step their surgical techniques, synthesized with dissections on a cadaver for a profound look at the anatomy of the relevant areas.

Topping up the scientific program is the novel introduction of a topic: Artificial Intelligence (A.I.) and robotics. Take a step into the future and discover the developments made in this field, and learn how their application could affect individual practice methods.

Fifteen rooms in parallel means it’s impossible to be everywhere at the same time. IMCAS Academy guarantees your learning on the go. Learn smarter with this easy to use app, the e-learning platform that proposes over 5,500 presentations from IMCAS and partner congresses for members to search and re-watch the sessions they want at their own pace and time. Come to the Academy booths during the congress to discover its functions.

IMCAS is an annual reunion giving you the opportunity to reconnect with peers. The Networking Cocktail and the Gala Dinner are highlight evening events. Unusual, exchange, and add another level of richness to your congress experience.

Topic series broaden your knowledge across fields!

The IMCAS scientific program is built upon 15 key themes that cover surgical and non-surgical procedures for both functional and aesthetic corrections.

To help optimize your 3 learning days, each theme has been regrouped and incorporated into series of sessions. Each series ranges from a minimum of 4 hours to 3 full days to ensure full coverage of the latest developments in the topic. While the learning content of sessions are curated in collaboration with the scientific coordinator and learned societies, some receive support from the industry through educational grants. All sessions of a series, whether they are under educational grants or not, comply with the conflict of interest policy.

IMCAS 2020 GALA DINNER

Browse through the grids for the activities proposed by sponsoring companies. These activities are informative yet commercial sessions that promote products and services, therefore the content are under the complete responsibility of sponsoring companies.
If 13,000 physicians are already learning online from IMCAS Academy, we must be doing something right.

In addition to fresh content updated weekly plus a VIDEO LIBRARY of 3,600 videos and a SCIENTIFIC BLOG of 120 contributions, the app allows you to discuss and debate on real-life cases with the IMCAS ALERT, a free feature where you can anonymously inquire help on complications. As soon as a case is posted, the community reacts - a goldmine of info. Remember to stay tuned for our LIVE MONTHLY WEBINARS.
